AMERICAN PSYCHOLOGIST

The American Psychologist is the official journal of the American Psychological Association, publishing both the official papers of the Association and substantive articles on psychology. The July issue contains a calendar of events taking place at the Annual Convention and abstracts of all papers to be presented at the Convention. In addition, once each year the American Psychologist devotes an entire issue to the extensive coverage and analysis of a single topic of current concern to psychology. The broad scope of this issue makes it of interest to a wide and varied audience.

Monthly. Subscription: $10.00

JOURNAL OF CONTEMPORARY PSYCHOLOGY

A journal of reviews — critical reviews — of books, films, and other material in the field of psychology. Material reviewed is selected by the editorial staff to represent a world-wide cross-section of psychological works. The reviews are prepared by those who have competence in specialized fields in psychology, but are written for a broad and varied audience. It provides a means by which the reader may keep abreast of current psychological thought and opinion. Reviews of approximately 380 books are published annually.

Monthly. Subscription: $10.00

JOURNAL OF ABNORMAL PSYCHOLOGY

The Journal of Abnormal Psychology is devoted to basic research and theory in the broad area of abnormal behavior. To cite a few illustrative examples, case histories, studies of therapy and behavior change, experimental studies and analyses of abnormal behavior and motivation, and theories of personality or emotional abnormality all are areas which would fall within the field of interest of this journal. Approximately 450 pages containing an average of 100 articles annually.

Bimonthly. Subscription: $10.00

JOURNAL OF APPLIED PSYCHOLOGY

This journal gives primary consideration to original quantitative investigations of value to those people interested in the following broad areas: personnel research; industrial working conditions; research on opinion and morale factors; job analysis and classification research; marketing and advertising research; and vocational and educational prognosis, diagnosis, and guidance at the secondary and college levels. Approximately 450 pages containing an average of 80 articles annually.

Bimonthly. Subscription: $10.00

JOURNAL OF COMPARATIVE AND PHYSIOLOGICAL PSYCHOLOGY

This journal publishes original research reports in the field of comparative and physiological psychology, including animal learning, conditioning, and sensory processes. Editorial policies favor articles reporting studies of substantial scope, usually involving series of related experiments. A section of Supplementary Reports provides for short articles describing replications of or advances in techniques used in previously published researches. Approximately 1100 pages containing over 200 articles annually.

Bimonthly, two volumes per year.

Subscription: $20.00

JOURNAL OF EDUCATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY

The Journal of Educational Psychology publishes original investigations and theoretical papers dealing with problems of learning and teaching, and with the psychological development, relationships, and adjustment of the individual. Preference is given to studies of the more complex types of learning and behavior, especially in or relating to educational settings. Journal articles pertain to all levels of education and to all age groups. Approximately 400 pages containing 50 articles annually.

Bimonthly. Subscription: $10.00

JOURNAL OF CONSULTING PSYCHOLOGY

This publication is devoted to the area of clinical psychology, both child and adult. Its range of content reflects the many facets of this area, including such topics as personality assessment and diagnosis, theories and techniques of behavior modification, community mental health concepts and techniques, etiology of behavior, structure and dynamics of personality, and clinical psychopathology. The journal publishes original research reports, major formulations of clinical theory or concepts, and significant applications of psychological principles to clinical practice. Approximately 600 pages containing over 100 articles annually.

Bimonthly. Subscription: $10.00

JOURNAL OF PERSONALITY AND SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY

This journal is devoted to basic research theory in the broad areas of social interaction and group process. Specifically, it deals with (a) interpersonal perception and attitude change, (b) the psychological aspects of formal social systems and less structured collective phenomena, (c) the socialization process at both the child and adult levels, (d) social motivation and personality dynamics, (e) the structure of personality, and (f) the relation of personality to group process and social systems. Approximately 1350 pages containing 125 prime articles and 125 brief reports.

Monthly, two volumes per year. There are six issues in each volume. Subscription: $20.00. Beginning 1967, three volumes per year. Subscription: $30.00

JOURNAL OF EXPERIMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY

The journal publishes original experimental investigations which are intended to contribute to the development of psychology as an experimental science. Studies with normal human subjects are given preference over studies involving abnormal or animal subjects, except when the latter are specifically oriented toward the extension of general psychological theory. The objective of this publication is the concise exposition of both data and conclusions from substantial segments of current research effort. Approximately 1500 pages containing 175 prime articles and 25 Supplementary Reports.

Monthly, two volumes per year. There are six issues each volume. Subscription: $20.00. Beginning in 1967, three volumes per year - four issues in each volume. Subscription: $30.00

PSYCHOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS

Psychological Abstracts publishes concise abstracts of the world's literature in psychology and allied subjects, to the extent that they are pertinent to psychology. The available literature in all languages is covered, although all titles and abstracts are in English. The abstracts of research literature are of the non-evaluative, informative type, giving the problem, method, subjects used, and the principal results and conclusions. Abstracts of book reviews and discussion papers describe the topics and principal points of view presented. Due to the rapid growth of literature in the field, Psychological Abstracts has, in the last three years, increased the number of abstracts published from 12,500 to approximately 18,000 annually.

Monthly. Subscription: $20.00 per year. Effective January 1967, Subscription: $30.00 per year.

PSYCHOLOGICAL BULLETIN

The Psychological Bulletin is concerned with research reviews and methodological contributions in the field of psychology. One of the principal functions of this journal is to publish critical, evaluative summaries of research. The methodological articles are directed toward people who might or do make practical use of such information, and are intended to bridge the gap between the technical statistician and the typical research psychologist. Articles feature the application of new methodology as well as the creative application of more familiar methodology. Approximately 900 pages containing 60 prime articles and 10 brief reports annually.

*Monthly, two volumes per year.
Subscription: $20.00*

PSYCHOLOGICAL REVIEW

The Psychological Review is the major psychological journal for articles of theoretical significance to any area of scientific endeavor in psychology. It contains original articles which propose theoretical ideas and developments, and offers critical discussions of theoretical issues. Recent issues have contained papers on such topics as memory, drive and incentive, speech perception, conceptual behavior, pastural sets, electroconvulsive shock, food intake, depth perception, learning sets, and cognitive interactions. Approximately 500 pages containing 25 prime articles, 15 short articles annually.
